This study uses a simulation methodology to systematically analyze the explanatory power of three alternative distributive justice norms (equity, equality, and anchoring) in describing the judgments of arbitrators in conventional arbitration. Specifically, 69 experienced arbitrators determined a wage settlement for 25 simulated disputes. Each dispute was described by the same seven criteria, which provided data relevant to the three alternative norms of arbitration. The weightings of the criteria were determined for each arbitrator by regressing wage settlement on the seven criteria. In addition, clusters of arbitrators employing similar policies were identified. Results indicated that arbitrators are very consistent in their judgments. However, they do not subjectively know the factors that affect their judgment. In addition, the results showed that the most common arbitration norm was anchoring; to maintain the status quo by simply adjusting the present wage by the average arbitrated increase in the industry. Equity (inflation rate, financial condition of the firm, average local wage) and equality (union and management final offers) factors were...

Reviews

The best pdf i possibly go through. it was writtern quite properly and useful. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

-- Miss Sienna Fay Jr.

Without doubt, this is actually the best job by any publisher. It is writter in basic phrases instead of difficult to understand. You will like the way the author publish this publication.
