Health Professions Press,U.S. Hardback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Speaking Our Minds: What it's Like to Have Alzheimer's (2nd Revised edition), Lisa Snyder, Gain exceptional insight into the world of the person with Alzheimer's through this enlightening collection of first-hand accounts. "Speaking Our Minds" provides an unparalleled view into the day-to-day experience of Alzheimer's through the reflections of seven diverse individuals with the disease. By interweaving each person's responses from in-depth interviews with her own thoughtful interpretation, dementia expert Lisa Snyder explores the many dimensions of the Alzheimer's experience. As a result, this rich text offers professionals, family caregivers, students, and people who have dementia the opportunity to learn more about: the uniqueness of each person's experience and symptoms; coping strategies people use to face the changes and losses in their lives; the changes that are experienced as the disease progresses; barriers to living full and dignified lives; how to identify with and listen to persons with Alzheimer's; and, distinct issues for young-onset persons with dementia. This book is ideal for people with early-stage Alzheimer's and related dementias as well as for anyone who interacts with that person, including professional or family caregivers, friends, and relatives. Discussion questions provide thoughtful material for use in coursework in aging and dementia, support groups, or book groups. The variety of backgrounds and perspectives of each featured person means that you will likely find similarities between the people in this book and your own personal experience. Whether this is your first introduction to Alzheimer's or you have an extensive knowledge of the disease, you are sure to learn from some or all of the brave and honest people who are featured. This book will transform the way you look at Alzheimer's and how you interact with those who have it.
