Not illustrated. 1895 Excerpt: .is that seconds will serve him for purposes of deliberation when minutes won t be long enough for others. The opportunity which eludes him must be flying at lightning speed, and at lightning speed it may be flying and not escape at that. Light breaks in upon him with a flash and not as the dawn comes. Almost simultaneously with the statement of a case he makes up his mind about it, and a disposition of it, so far as he is concerned, follows instantly. He brings about rather than dreams of results. What he sees he sees with absolute clearness, and quick as he is in framing purposes he is scarcely less expeditious in their execution. He can be turned aside by nothing when once his resolution has been formed. His tenacity stands on a level with his courage. If obstacles influence him at all they stimulate rather than discourage. There is in his lexicon no such word as fail. He was a successful builder at an age when years of school life is usually looked forward to, and he toyed with the Wall Street ticker to the tune ot thousands long before he was out of his teens. An intuitive perception of the relative importance of things steers him clear of the irrelevant and keeps him on the track of the substantial. It is about as easy to take him by surprise as it is to grasp a shadow and imprison it. He is...
